LOGLINE

A documentary about the journey of mankind to discover its true force and identity, challenging the modern view of the world and reconsidering the world view and value systems of ancient societies. It's a quest through science and consciousness, individual and planetary, exploring our relationships with ourselves, the world around us and the universe as a whole. It demonstrates how connected we really are and how unnatural today's sense of separation really is as opposed to the understanding of unity and oneness found in many ancient traditions. It's a transcendental pilgrimage of repossession and empowerment, affirming our place in the universe and asserting mankind as a conscious mankind with real power as individuals and as a collective to create our own reality.

SYNOPSIS

The world and human beings are undergoing a period of powerful transformation. A great part of the change has to do with a shift in consciousness. There is a great and growing desire for change in the world. Are we prepared? Do we like the world we live in today? What are its contradictions? How can we improve it? Are we sure that we are the most evolved people who ever lived on this earth? Is there a relationship between what happens to us and what we think? If so, can we model reality and make it work in our favor? What kind of world do YOU want?

Another World aims to be an enlightening and eye-opening documentary that deals with big questions such as these. Are we sure civilization has moved, is moving, and will move in a desirable direction? In addressing this concept, the documentary delves into many aspects of modern living. It's a journey that will take us from the past to the world of today, synthesizing old and new ideas and various threads of research and knowledge in an attempt to understand where we stand as individuals and as humankind, an examination of society's evolution toward globalization and a reflection on the idea of progress as it has been defined to date.

Starting from the present, the analysis goes back in time in search of civilizations that developed and progressed in a different manner and from which we have much to learn; societies exterminated by other branches of humanity in the name of "civilization" and "modernization" but that today could serve as examples by teaching us a lot about ourselves, our present and consequently about our future, civilizations such as the Maya and Native Americans.

These ancient civilizations, even if having lived thousands of miles apart and at different times in history, are similar not only because of their way of relating to nature, each other and the cosmos, but mostly because their enlightened world view anticipated what some contemporary scientists have long argued: everything is alive and interconnected. The Mayans greeted one another with the traditional saying In Lak'ech, which means "I am another yourself" or "I am you, you are me". Today, modern science and quantum physics has confirmed that indeed, everything in the universe is energy and that there is no separation between the observer and what is being observed. Everything is connected and everything is alive. Water - when exposed to different stimuli such as human emotions, words or even music - responds, transforms and communicates by forming beautiful crystal shapes (from the research of Dr. Masaru Emoto, the Japanese researcher we had the true honor of interviewing in his office in Tokyo).

Unveiled is a surprising reality far more astounding and remarkable than we are used to think. The universe and the scientific principles of quantum physics assert that man is a perfect creature who might have gone astray because of an imposed lifestyle and value system that does not really belong to him, a striking truth that reveals the power of his natural ability to create his own reality. Figuring out how and why this happened and what we can do about it is the stirring idea behind our documentary.

Perhaps now, as the global financial and social crisis of unparalleled scale still unfolds, we are moving in a different direction. The winds of change are upon us and a new era will begin in association with an increasingly conscious mankind. It's as if man finally seeks and awakens to his real identity, to his natural ability to create his own reality, slowly abandoning the mind-body dualism that characterizes much of modern thought. This new conscious mankind is finally questioning the idea of progress, that is the idea that advances in technology, science, and social organization inevitably produce an improvement in our human condition and is repossessing that ancestral part of himself which had been lost in the way. All this shift has an ancient feeling, where happiness is not associated with matter but to the spirit, asserting the primacy of the spiritual and transcendental over the material and re-embracing rhythmical and cyclical processes as opposed to linear ones. The sacred calendars of our ancestors mapped the elemental principles of the universe, now it is up to us to grasp this knowledge and make it our own. It is time for us to walk as our ancestors did so many years ago. The moment has arrived, Another world is possible.

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

Director Thomas Torelli, shooting on location at Monument Valley, USA

Another World was born with the idea - and if we can say - with the ambition, of engaging the audience in a discussion about the change that, willing or not (and believe it or not), the world is preparing to face. A change in consciousness, customs and way of seeing things. In essence, a different understanding of ourselves as individuals and as part of something much bigger than ourselves. There's been a lot of talk about it in these years because it's linked to the particular period of time that we're living, but it will change life in this planet so significantly that its effects will subsequently be much longer lasting. And that's why I decided to make this film just now.

In the film we will try to tell the story of how mankind - by focusing on a certain type of lifestyle - has lost his way, and in order to find himself again, will have to look behind him (into past cultures) and forward (into the science that increasingly confirms ancient wisdom).

To achieve this, the viewer has to experience with extreme intensity every frame of the film, thus everything will be extremely curated in content and visually, and as you proceed through the story, the color correction as well as the music will accompany the theme. The goal of this narrative style is to bring the viewer to the conclusion (thanks to the message and how it's delivered) with a feeling of relief, amazement and empowerment. To help us tell the story, the 63 minute documentary will feature powerful interviews with New York Times best-selling authors and researchers as well as scholars, academics and experts in quantum physics, neuroscience, ecology, psychology, sociology, theology, philosophy, Mayan and American Indian culture. Having decided not to shoot fictional scenes, the viewer will be guided through the journey by the explanations in the interviews. In the parts relating to quantum physics, due to the difficulty of the subject, we will simplify and support the delivery of the message by using 2D and 3D graphics and reconstructions.

In my experience, I can honestly say that making a documentary almost always takes you into an adventure in unknown territory, and Another World was no exception. After spending the last two long and arduous years working on this project, as we approach the finishing line I can say it's all been worth it. Absolutely everything. It has definitely changed me. And hopefully, I won't be the only one. With Another World, I hope to give rise to an audience of individuals that become active, conscious agents of life, and not just passive spectators of life.
